Caryn Isaacs, BCPA has over 30 years of experience helping people to make decisions through group presentations and workshops, using her Interactive Assessment Instruments.

When patients are brought to the hospital alone, without anyone accompanying them and in crisis mode, the hospital is left to decide where to “place” them. Often, they have no information regarding their agent under their health care proxy or power of attorney and many times the patient can’t communicate their wishes. Hospital staff then hounds the individuals into giving names of relatives simply in the hopes of getting rid of their problem. These family members may have little to do with their relatives. The person becomes an easy target for their supposed loved ones. The family member then preys on the patient’s weaknesses, as soon as they find out that money is involved. We help our clients gather their very necessary legal documents so that true advocates can protect them against fraud. We contact legal authorities and work together to retrieve lost property and assets, while also keeping the individual safe and secure for the future.

Judy had a valid Will but not a Power of Attorney. The hospital insisted she name a relative. Her cousin tried to get her to sign over her home and investments.

Rose was so distraught when her daughter passed before her. She hoped her step sister would help. Instead she tried to help herself to Rose’s assets.

Simond never met his niece, but the hospital told him to give her the keys to his apartment. She helped herself to his bank accounts and investments.

Caryn Isaacs, BCPA works together with attorney’s and law enforcement to protect our seniors against fraud. We give a voice to their concerns. By listening to our clients, we are able to place them in environments that fit their own needs and desires or help keep them safely in their homes.
